shock:

Dubai, February 9

OIL EXPORTERS HAVE not recovered from the dramatic oil price drop in 2014, the head of the IMF said today, and she cautioned against spending money on "white elephant projects."

"With revenues down, fiscal deficits are only slowly declining, despite significant reforms on both the spending and revenue sides, including the introduction of VAT and excise taxes," said Lagarde, the managing director of the IMF, told a conference in Dubai.

"This has led to a sharp increase in public debt, from 13% of GDP in 2013 to 33% in 2018," Lagarde said. "Uncertainty in the growth outlook for oil exporters also reflected moves to shift rapidly toward renewable energy over the new few decades with the Paris climate change pact."

She said there was scope to strengthen fiscal frameworks in the Middle East with some of the weaknesses emerging from "short-termism and instability." Lagarde said governments in the region might be tempted to invest in white elephant projects instead of investment in people and potential. Saudi Arabia, the Middle East's biggest economy, has announced to go ahead with three major projects, including NEOM, a $500 billion economic zone announced by Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman. They are backed by the country's sovereign wealth fund, the Public Investment Fund. Lagarde also said across the region it is common for sovereign wealth funds to directly finance projects, bypassing the normal budget process, while state-owned enterprises in some countries had high levels of borrowing, out of budget. She said oil exporters could
